BRITISH 8TH ARMY CAPTURES CATANIA; NAZIS HURLED BACK TO HIGH GROUND; WAY IS PAVED FOR MESSINA ATTACK

Berlin Radio Admits Catania is Evacuated — Believe Germans Decided to Pull Out When Trap Developed as Americans Looped Around Mt. Etna — Race for Messina is On.

By International News Service
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 5.—Troops
of the British Eighth Army today captured the great Sicilian seaport
of Catania, hurled the Germans
back to high ground farther north and paved the way for full-scale attack on Messina, less than two miles from the mainland of Italy.

Allied troops also captured the road junction of Paterno, midway between Adrano and Catania.

The Berlin radio admitted that Catania had been evacuated.

Details were lacking as to whether any street fighting preceded Catania's fall. But for the past two days, the Germans are known to have been withdrawing and the city is believed to be intact.

"Molly Pitcher" Days Designated for Bensalem

Lower Bensalem Township will honor Molly Pitcher, the Revolutionary heroine of the Battle of Monmouth, by endeavoring to make Friday and Saturday the largest "war stamp days" of the year.

All factories and plants, not governed by a war bond committee
from their main offices, are showing splendid cooperation for this drive by purchasing stamps from their general funds to supply employees who wish to "help pitch
a third strike on the Axis" by investing just a little bit extra in their government this week-end.

These patriotic plants are: Aud-
lusia Textile Mill, Badenhausen
Corp., Edgington Metal Specialty
Co., Gray Line Hosiery Co., Mad-
sen Machine Shop, Penn Salt
Chemical Co., Penn Salmon Feed
Mill, Sidebottom Narrow Fabric,
and F. A. Simon Bros.

Molly Pitcher day has caught the fancy of the juniors in the community, and district chairmen have turned their booths over to them
for this particular event. Newport-ville sales will be carried on at Mrs. Felix Douglass's general store, by Miss Ruth Mattox and Master Harry Robinson, who has been turning the proceeds of his victory garden into stamps and bonds for the last two years.

Echo Beach section is being canvassed throughout the summer
colony by Miss Helen Irene Durr.
In Andalusia, Miss A. Cecelia
Jullif, with Hester Wright, Catharine Ferguson and Patricia Engle will have their booth installed on the corner of Locust avenue and Bristol Pike.

Mrs. E. Paul Patton, in charge of organizing Lower Bensalem Township for the forthcoming war bond drive in September, to date has been unable to locate a person to head this drive in the Trevose territory. The qualifications for a district chairman is one capable of receiving and listing reports and being within easy access of a telephone. Any person in this area feeling fitted for this position and wishing to serve their country by volunteering services, may contact
Mrs. Patton, Box 79, Newportville, Pa., or by telephoning Bristol 537
to make arrangements for an interview.

Two Newtown Residents Are Buried This Week

NEWTOWN, Aug. 5.—Funeral services for Mrs. Ella A. Watson, widow of William M. Watson, were held from her late home, Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock. The Rev.
John E. Mertz, pastor of the Newtown Presbyterian Church, conducted the services. Interment was in Newtown Cemetery.

Funeral services for J. Bartleson
Hill were held Tuesday afternoon
from the Newtown Episcopal Church at 2:30 o'clock, with the Rev. Edmund Sills, rector of St.
Luke's, in charge of the services.
Interment was in Newtown Cemetery.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service
While Allied forces in Sicily continued today to pulverize the crumbling Etna defense line, the eyes of the world turned to Rome,
where Italian premier Pietro Badoglio's cabinet was to meet to act
on what the Rome radio called
"important decisions."

But despite the popular demand
throughout Italy for peace, observers saw little hope for immediate capitulation of Italy as a result of today's cabinet meeting.

Late dispatches from the Sicilian front meanwhile said the Allied withering air and naval bombardment of the Etna line continued as ground forces made new advances.
The American Seventh Army in the north was reported unofficially to have made a wide advance which penetrated beyond San Fratello, 12 miles east of San Stefano—a sweep which now threatens to outflank the Germans on the north and northwest slopes of Mount Etna.

While Italy's allies in the Reich
were given another night's respite from massed, concentrated aerial assaults, Britain-based warplanes
continued to hammer at the Axis
from the west. During the night

Leslie Cook, Edgely, Is Hurt; Motorcycle Crash

EDGELEY, Aug. 5.—Leslie Cook, 37, Grieb avenue, remains in St.
Francis Hospital, Trenton, N. J., for treatment of injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident in Burlington, N. J., on Monday.

Cook was on a broken shoulder bone,
and a hip injury.
At the time of the crash it is stated a dog ran into the highway,
causing the machine to overturn.
Cook was with a group of motor-
cyclists at the time, it is stated,
but no one else was on his machine.

in Sept. Now Know Where Names Will Appear

LIST IS HERE GIVEN

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 5.—Drawings for ballot positions in the September primary election have been completed.

On the Republican county ticket
there are no contests, but for the office of County Commissioner, Simon K. Moyer, Silverdale, drew
No. 1 position, and John S. Roberts, Bristol, drew No. 2 position on the ballot.

Edward Hancock, Warrington,
drew the No. 1 position on the Democratic ballot for County Commissioner, with Colonel Roger O.
Mason in No. 2 position; Theodore Gordon in third position and Howard Black in fourth position, with one to be nominated.

There are 12 contests for borough and township offices in Bucks county, and the drawings for ballot
positions resulted as follows:

Upper Southampton Township,
supervisor, Republican: Louis E.
Staeble and John Robert Lauer.

CONFIRMATION RECEIVED OF DEATH OF WOOD STREET MAN; RAYMOND J. PHILLIPS, S. 2-C, HAD PREVIOUSLY BEEN REPORTED AS MISSING

Confirmation of the belief that
Raymond Joseph Phillips, S. 2-C, U. S. Naval Reserve, was killed
last November, has been received by his mother, Mrs. Katherine G.
Phillips, 728 Wood street.

In a communication from Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Mrs.
Phillips is informed of details surrounding action of the cruiser, the U. S. S. "Juneau" in the Pacific
area, loss of which according to Mr.
Knox's word: "Forces me reluctantly
to the conclusion that the personnel missing, as a result of the loss of the Juneau, were in fact killed by enemy action. Among these was your son, Raymond Jo-

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

Doylestown will be one of the regular stopping points for the discharge and taking on of passengers
on the Scranton-Philadelphia route of helicopter service, once it can be established, according to L. H.
Ristow, general traffic manager of Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines. Mr.
Ristow announced the tentative list of towns and cities along this route which will be provided with the helicopter service, at the same time filing the list of places to be served by his company with this new form of transportation with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington.

The application of Greyhound
Lines for a certificate to operate
helicopters along the same routes
as the company buses now follow,
was filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board several weeks ago and is scheduled to come up for a hearing
early in September.

Appearing before Perkasis Borough Council, Attorney Webster
Aschey presented the case of Israel
Stout, who is trying to recover
damages to his property on Fifth street, near Spruce, caused by flood water.

The property is in a hollow below
Menlo Park and has been damaged
for the past ten years, so that now there is a large cavity six or eight feet in depth in front of the house
extending out to the sidewalk. It has been necessary to put up a barrier.

Red Army Blasts Way Into Orel Base

By Natalia Rene
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, Aug. 5.—Red army assault forces which blasted their way into the battered German operational base of Orel engaged today
in bitter street fighting with despairately resisting Nazi rearguard
forces covering a headlong retreat
by the main German garrison.

The main force of Nazis fled westward through a narrowing escape corridor from the strategic base they had held for 22 months
in an attempt to escape the fate
which befell German troops surrounded and annihilated at Stal-
nograd.

Immediately after the Soviet high command announced that its siege units had broken into the city and began engaging Nazi rearguard
units in hand-to-hand fighting the Berlin radio broadcast a dispatch
by DNR official German news agency, admitting that the Nazis had evacuated Orel.

The German version of the rout
of Nazi forces said that the German lines had been "taken back behind the remnants of the city of Orel."
It was asserted that the Germans had "disengaged themselves from the enemy and taken up previously prepared more favorable positions."
Berlin also claimed that evacuation of all military and industrial establishments at Orel had been effected
"according to plan."

Formulate Plan To Cushion Fathers' Draft

By William S. Neal
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The Administration today formulated a plan to cushion induction of fathers October 1st as a movement was launched to recall Congress to enact legislation postponing their draft.

The Administration plan was disclosed by authorities to assure thorough combing of the rolls for single men and childless husbands,
and arranging quotas both on a national and state basis so that fathers will be the last class called.

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D.), Mont., aroused over the announcement that the draft of fathers will begin October 1st, proposed that Congress be recalled from its summer recess unless the War Manpower Commission voluntarily postpones the "dads' draft."

A bill by Wheeler, postponing induction of fathers until January 1st, is pending in the Senate. It was reported by the Military Affairs Committee shortly before Congress
recessed until September 14th.

Fearful that Congress could not complete action on the legislation
in the 16 days from the time it re-convened until the draft started, Wheeler turned to other means to stop induction of men with children.

"Unless the War Manpower Commission delays the draft I will ask Speaker Rayburn and Democratic Senate Leader Alben Barkley to call Congress back earlier," said Wheeler, who is in Montana.

"The only fair thing to do is to let Congress act, since a bill is pending."

SCOUT CAMP CLOSED THIRD WEEK OF SEASON

Third Week Ended at Camp Ockanickon On Saturday

MERIT BADGES GIVEN

The third week of Camp Ockan-
ickon, the Bucks County Boy Scout camp, came to a close Saturday with honors and advancement equal to that of any week of the year. 78 merit badges, 8 first class and 29 second class advancements were passed and certificates were awarded at the board of review on Friday evening, which was composed of Rev. A. B. Davidson, Clarence F. Hawk and Roy Buckner, all of Doylestown. Much activity on the part of the Order of the Arrow,
the national honor camp brotherhood, has been in evidence during the summer.

On Friday evening, the dedication of a new ceremonial grounds took place at which time Rev. Davidson was the speaker. Awards were presented to the leaders present so they may be given at the troop meetings when the boys arrive home. The program this year has been built on advancement and training and many scouts have learned scout skills and achievements that will be of use to them
in further advancing in scouting.

Outdoor tests have been especially stressed and such things as the adventure trail, commando trail,
emergency service and nature trails
have been in constant use.

This week a group of 97 scouts and leaders will bring the camp to a close for the most successful sesson of Ockanickon.

Will Again Discuss New Fire Company Here

Another meeting is to be held tonight in furtherance of the organization of a volunteer fire company for the sixth ward. The meeting will be held in Karp's hall, and has been called for 8:30 o'clock.

Residents of the ward who are interested in this project are urged to be present at the meeting tonight. There will be discussion of many important phases of the organization.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(INS)—Despite tremendous demands the assault on Europe will make on American and British Air Transport Commands, there will be no
slackening in the steadily increasing flow of planes and equipment
to Russia, India and the Far East,
it was assured today.

Schedules have been set up for deliveries of planes, spare parts, ground and air personnel. These will not be affected by the sudden furious air struggle heralding the long-awaited Second Front, prom-

the autumn leaves fall."

Already, what is described as comparable to an entirely new air

operating all along the 2,000 mile eastern front.

HUNTER PLANT SETS PRODUCTION RECORDS

Production Increased 50% For Three Days At Emilie Plant

WOMEN PROVE WORTH

For three consecutive days in the week ending July 31st, employees of the U. S. Navy Plant of the Hunter Manufacturing Corporation established new highs in their daily production of ammunition for the Navy.

On the best of these three days
the production total was 50% higher than the average daily production of the past three months.

The plant is located at Emilie and is engaged 100% in production for the United States Navy.

"Eighty-five per cent of the workers on this production line are women. Ranging in age from 18 to 60, they are doing a magnificent job
every day proving the effectiveness of women in war industry. Spurred on by the need for this extra production effort, the women of Hunter's turned in a display of drive and determination which answers once and for all the question of whether or not they can "take it" on the job.
In one day, an increase of 50% in production!"

"Forgotten were vacations, headaches, movie shows, shopping and trouble. They were on the job
—and they produced."

"Best of all, the women of Hunter's have proven that women can take their place alongside of men in production—ask no favors—and meet all emergencies in the manner of the fighting men whom they are determined to bring back home
in a hurry," said a spokesman.

Prophetic Conference Is To Start Here Friday

Of interest to Bristol church goers is the prophetic and Bible conference to be held in Trades Hall,
Wood street, starting tomorrow night at 7:45 and continuing until Sunday, August 15th.

Tonight, the Rev. Charles Rickenbach, Camden, N. J., noted evangelist, will bring the last message
of the campaign he has conducted in connection with the indoor camp
meetings which have been in progress there since July 8th. The speaker of the prophetic conference will be the Rev. B. H. Maybury, Trenton, N. J., outstanding Bible prophetic authority in his denomination, contributor to many prophetic publications, and in demand as a conference speaker. The theme of his first sermon will be "Is the Second Coming of Jesus a Reasonable Doctrine?"

There will be no service Saturday, but of special interest will be the public mass meeting Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

Does Lemon-Ade Do This?

(By "The Stroller")
We've heard of "pink elephants," purple snakes and the like—but there's one in South Langhorne that has them all stopped.

It's a "blonde mouse"—the common variety of mouse that sneaks in from the fields and nibbles at this and that crumb that is laying about, until a bit of cheese in a trap lays it low.

The occupant of the house, a young woman who is employed in Bristol, insists that she is not seeing things except in their true
light—the mouse is truly
"blonde."

Truck Crashes Into Pole; Four Are Hurt

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—Swerving from the highway when a front
tire blew out at 9 a. m., yesterday,
a truck driven by David Carlson, 42, of 25 W. State st., Doylestown, mounted the curb at Monument ave.
and City Line, knocked down an iron pole, and ripped up 12 feet of a high iron fence before coming to a halt.

Carlson, who tried to stop the machine at the bottom of a steep
grade after the blowout, suffered injuries of both legs and was taken for treatment to Roxborough Memorial Hospital. Three riders in the truck, also treated there, were Francis O'Brien, 30, of 5350 Yocum
St.; Louis Culberson, 42, of 13 N.
Edgewood st., and Bruce Geisinger,
52, of 327 Avon rd., Upper Darby.

BRISTOL MAN "BAGS" 2 JAPANESE ZEROS

Sgt. Harry Ellis, Buckley Street, Doing His Part
in New Guinea

AVENGES LOSS OF B-17

A young Buckley street soldier
served as gunner on a Flying Fortress which recently shot down
two Japanese Zeros, according to news dispatches received here.

The young man is Sgt. Harry Ellis, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ellis, Buckley street.

The Zeros shot down avenged for loss of another B-17 on a bombing mission, according to press dispatches received from New Guinea.

There were three of the Zeros which pounced on three B-17's from above, one Fortress being hit, it is stated. Then two of them attacked the Fortress piloted by Lt. Joseph Hensler, of Summit, N. J., on which Ellis is a gunner. A hail of lead exploded one of the Zeros and caused the other to crash.

Sgt. Ellis enlisted in June, 1941,
and had his basic training in Maine.
In February, 1942, he went to Australia, and was soon enroute to New Guinea where he has remained ever since.

Ellis' brother, Joseph Ellis, Jr., is in New York with the U. S. Coast Guard.

Sgt. Ellis, prior to his enlistment,
was employed by Thomas L.
Leedom Co. He had attended Bristol high school.

Four Divorce Suits Started in County Court

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 5.—Four divorces were started in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County
yesterday.

The divorces were as follows:
George Michener, Edison, against Sara Price Michener, 1412 North 16th st., Phila., on grounds of indignities to the person. They were married in Doylestown, July 7, 1934.
Ethel Mae Mahoney, Kintnersville, against Andrew J. Mahoney, 235 Rochelle ave., Phila., on grounds of indignities to the person. They were married Nov. 16, 1937, at Elkton.

Ralston T. Sines, 232 N. Hellertown avenue, Quakertown, against Frances H. Sines, Franklinton, N.
J., on grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment and indignities to the person. They were married May 14, 1940, at Ambler.

Juliet G. Roth, Newtown, against Edwin A. Roth, 34, Langhorne, on grounds of desertion. They were married Jan. 19, 1935, at Newtown.

Report Capture of Krug

Toronto, Ont.—Canadian military headquarters today announced the capture of Hans Peter Krug, Nazi oberleutnant, at North Bay, Ont., approximately 115 miles north of the Gravenhurst officers prison camp from which he escaped Monday.

Officials did not disclose how he eluded the intensive search conducted by Canadian authorities nor details of how he was captured.

Japs Lost 40,500 at Guadalcanal

Washington—Japanese losses during the battle for Guadalcanal were placed today at 40,500 men by Col. Royal L. Gervais, of the Field Artillery in a report to the War Department.

Gervais, who recently returned from the South Pacific, said that only 1,500 of a total of 42,000 Japanese troops escaped death or capture by evacuation in boats.

Allied Bombers Attack Naples

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—Allied warplanes gave the Italian mainland city of Naples its third successive dark-gate assault, concentrating on the port's submarine base and dock areas and shooting down 11 Axis planes. North African headquarters announced today.

The Sicilian harbor of Messina, toward which enemy troops now are retreating, and the rail town of Battipaglia also were hammered last night, an official announcement disclosed. Subsidiary targets throughout Sicily were battered day and night by fighters, bombers and fighter-bombers which concentrated particularly on Axis communication lines.

RENT CONTROL REPORT

The report of a special House investigating committee on the Office of Price Administration's exercise of its rent control powers in 376 defense areas is another example of belated Washington discovery. All the practices which the committee criticized have been known to the people in the affected areas for months.

As individuals and as members of such respected organizations as the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the people long ago pointed out the OPA's mistakes. But only now is Congress officially notified that the people were right all along.

The committee found that the OPA adopted rules in conflict with local laws, that it rode over state laws affecting contracts, that it defied state eviction laws, that it arbitrarily froze rents at rates so low that owners were subjected to property confiscation without due process, and that the pleas of many owners for adjustments were ignored.

OPA made the primary mistake of falling in line with the New Deal judgment that any one who owns property is by reason of that fact a mercenary capitalist and a menace to national unity. The fact that hundreds of thousands of people have their meager life savings or small inheritance invested in rental residence property was beyond the comprehension of the OPA classroom economists. Even the thought of investigating in the interest of truth was beyond them. So they proceeded on a false assumption. Inevitably, they made mistakes right and left.

They inflicted distress and hardship and insolvency on thousands of frugal people. And they did it by law evasion, if not worse. It is now up to Congress to make amends for its failure to crack down on the OPA rent department long ago.

NEW TAX PLAN

America's tax structure is fixed for the remainder of this year but what will happen next year may have repercussions at the polls when the next President is elected. On September 8 the House Ways and Means Committee will begin studies looking toward the raising of $10,000,000,000 more in revenue per annum. That sum is three times the cost of operating the Federal Government under Hoover. Among the proposals is an individual excess profits levy.

A last period would be chosen, probably covering several pre-war years. Earnings over that period would be considered normal. Earnings in excess of normal would be subject to a special tax rate over and above individual income taxes. This scheme, it is estimated, would raise approximately $4,000,000,000 annually.

This has all the earmarks of another of the leveling taxes so dear to the New Deal. Considerable opposition is expected, probably enough to kill the plan. War plant workers and farmers have received increased earnings, most of which would be subject to taxation under this scheme.

Letters To Editor

(The opinions expressed in the following communications are not necessarily those of the editor.)

Editor, Courier:

As one who has lived in Bristol prior to April 5th of this year, may we be given space in your paper to reply to the letter of Norman F. Keller printed in your issue of July 31st, 1943.

As we have never travelled far from home town, and consequently can be excused for the lack of knowing conditions in other sections of the country would it be pertinent to ask Mr. Keller if, for instance, the city where he hails from has all these recreational facilities which Bristol is devoid of? Now, if he had sent a "good will" ambassador in advance, say on April 1st, instead of the personal entrance into town on April 5th, we may have taken this matter up and provided all these necessary attributes ready for him when he stepped off the train. We can't do all these things overnight, hence the delay which has added to his discomfort.

In the meantime, if time hangs so heavily on his wrist watch, and if he is looking for added recreation, he may take a stroll over to the 290 block on Walnut street, this city, and visit Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson and see how much more they would be interested in bathing beaches and park benches than in their seven sons who are in the service.

Or he may call on John Lawler, of Bath street, and listen to this serviceman tell of the big "kick" he got out of being in the jungles of Guadalcanal and having one—bar of chocolate in four days for eats.

Mr. Keller further states that "it is well to realize that those in the armed forces are not the only contributors to the war effort deserving of hospitable attentions."

Well, I don't know whether Mr. Keller will like this or not, but here's one guy who will put his dough on the Americans who are in all parts of the world giving their lives, sufferings and sacrifices for Freedom and Democracy rather than on those who are looking for bathing beaches and park benches.

A Monthly Preview of the Shows

Coming To The Ritz

We're hearing on all sides that the motion picture industry is doing a great job — producing marvelous training films, morale films; the theatres are plugging and selling bonds and stamps day and night and the stars are everlastingly on tour or on the air.

Long at the top of the best seller list was "Random Harvest," "Random Harvest" as you all-knowing readers know, written by James Hilton. The James Hilton. The Goodbye Mr. Chips James Hilton, The Last Horizon James Hilton.

But above all, the Random Harvest James Hilton. This unusual story certainly qualified it as our candidate for the top of the best picture list, too.

If you've missed it — Don't!

The Oscar trophy of the Academy Award has been replaced. Director Busby Berkeley "For Me and My Gal" rewards his cast with a lump of sugar.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Drew raised his empty glass and half-turned toward the bartender, then set it down again. No, Nan was right—whisky didn't help.

Nothing helped—much. And yet life had to go on. He wondered how it would feel to wake up tomorrow without the old thrill of anticipation, the excitement of another day's venturing into the unknown.

And his words to Spud, so often repeated: "With the first royalties we'll get those eyes fixed." How would they ever get them fixed now?

Drew walked to the edge of the terrace and stood looking out toward the bay. How long he did not know. He only knew that when he raised his eyes it was to see Gloria in her nurse's uniform coming toward him across the terrace. She said nothing, but had both hands on his shoulders and, looking into his face, smiled that confident and trusting smile of hers.

Then suddenly he realized—she knew! She knew! She was telling him she knew.

And in that moment a realization of his desperate need for her swept over him. He wanted to lay his head against her breast, to feel her arms about him, blotting out the world; but he only stood there while his eyes told her what his lips could not say.

She whispered, "Let's not talk now, dear. Let's drive down to the river."

Still without speaking they left the car at the shack. Taking his hand, she led him down to the edge of the Rio Bravo, to the little pool by the river where they had first found happiness together.

Not until then did he ask, "How did you know?"

"Nan told me."

Side by side they sat down. The sands were still warm from the setting sun, and she laid her cheek against his, whispering, "I know what this means to you, I know."

She held him close to her, as a mother might hold a suffering child.

Later he found the release of words. "It's not just myself," he told her. "It's Spud and Nan and—us. That well, it meant so much. Do you know the first thing I thought of when I knew we'd missed the boat?"

"I remembered a day back on the piers outside Casper, when Spud and Molly watched their only baby die in a tent while a dust storm blew outside and there was nothing they could do but sit and wait and take it. I think I'd rather die than have that happen to us. But from now on I've got to go wherever I can find a job. I can't go back to the old one with States Oil—that's filled but somewhere else, in a country strange to you, where everything is different."

Once more he held her close. "I'm done, Gloria. I'm done."

"You're not done. You could never be done," she drew his arms tighter still about her. "Darling, do you really believe this makes so much difference? Men and women see things differently. To women what you call success and failure are outside things. They come and go. To me there's something so much more important—and that's the real you. As long as that hasn't changed, nothing in all this matters. Dearest, I'll be happy—terribly happy!—to hear your babies out on those piers, or here in the jungle, or wherever life calls them into being. But I want you more than life, and I want you unchanged. If the god I love can be beaten by this, then I have never known you."

"But it's for you I'm afraid."

"Don't ever be afraid for me. I can always nurse. I can make a home for you wherever you go. Darling, I don't want to wait—I want to share. Oh, sweetheart, can't you see—"

With a swift flowing motion she was in his arms; her own arms strained about him, her lips were tight on his lips, hungry and yearning, telling him with all her being that she belonged to him alone.

His pulse was pounding when, breathless, she released him.

"Is anything important after that?" she whispered. "The way your touch thrills me, the way my body answers to yours?"

He laid his face against her hair. "Help me, Gloria, for I'm down, and everything ahead is dark. I need all the love you have to lift me up and make me straight with the world again."

She smiled up at him. "You'll never have to ask for my love, darling—you have all of it, always."

His shoulders squared—it was as if new strength came flowing in upon him. He drew a deep breath. "The years ahead won't be easy. It won't be easy to say I'm licked and ask for another chance. But I can do it; together we can make another start."

Lifting her to her feet, Drew looked down into her eyes. Yes, life with her was so much simpler, so much more direct. There was some quality in this daughter of Spanish conquerors that could rise above poverty and defeat, so long as love was there.

"I never knew that love could be like this," he told her. "I'll never be worth your little finger—no man could—but with you beside me, I'll build again."

He saw the happiness shining in her eyes. "That is the Drew I know." Slowly they climbed back toward the shack, and with a little gasp she looked at her watch. "I'm overdue at the hospital. I'll have to fly!"

He waved as she drove out over the savanna, and with a feeling of new life walked back toward the river with his old swinging stride. Yes, he was beaten; but he had her. They were young, and they could start again. Bankrupt, a failure, owing money on every side, still he could start again.

Down by the river bottom the dusk of the savanna had turned to night, and Drew could see the lights of the well gleaming through the palms.

Four days more to drill before his time was up. Four days. But with the loss of the p. v. and the life had gone out of their work. It might be better to pull out of the well tomorrow, salvage what they could, and save the expense of four more days' blind drilling.

Halfway to the well he met three of Sergei's crew coming up the path. They had run out of bentonite. They told Drew, and the driller had sent them up for a dozen bags.

"Where's Sergei?" Drew asked. "Down at the well with Hank."

Nodding, Drew started forward, then angrily he stopped to listen—they were running that drill much too fast. Nothing was to be gained by hurry now.

As he neared the derrick he saw mud spouting wildly from the pipe. They weren't even keeping up the weight of the mud stream. Yes, it would be better to stop drilling at once than go on that way. Sergei was probably drunk again.

Frowning, Drew hurried around the edge of the mud pit, then with an involuntary gasp started back—he had stumbled on the prostrate body of a man. Quickly Drew knelt.

It was Hank, unconscious but breathing—Hank, who had been put in Sergei's crew to watch for trouble. Instantly alert, Drew straightened. A shadowy form was moving up on the derrick floor.

Without a sound Drew pulled himself up the ladder. Beyond the rotary table he saw Sergei lifting a heavy burden, and with a chill Drew recognized the familiar brown wrappings of dynamite. Methodically, without hurry, Sergei was laying sticks of the explosive directly beneath the engine.

Drew moved closer. He was standing in the full glare of the arc light now—only the length of the engine between them—and it was then the Russian saw him. Eyes wide with terror, Sergei straightened and, dropping the dynamite, pulled a short, heavy knife from his belt. In the same moment Drew vaulted across the engine.

Striking the oil-soaked boards, he slipped; his hand flew out, and, catching the brake lever, he pulled himself to his feet just as Sergei struck. Flipping Drew's shirt, the blade tore through, and like a searing brand ploughed across his skin—then Drew's left hand locked over the Russian's wrist.

Squalling like a cornered rat, Sergei jerked back, but the fingers only tightened.

And now Drew closed. His right hand fastened on Sergei's throat, and inch by inch he raised him from the floor. The Russian's heels began beating a frenzied tattoo against the engine head, his knees bent, and in a spasm of desperation he kicked. For a split second both men tottered on the very edge of the derrick floor, then, struggling to gain balance, Drew took one step backward. His foot struck air, he swayed outward, and, locked together, the two men plunged down.

With a splash they hit the mud pit. Drew beneath, lashing the surface to mucky froth. A face emerged, gasping for breath, then disappeared. Slowly an arm rose, holding a knife aloft. Glittering beneath the arc light the steel blade poised, quivered, and sank from sight.

The waters of the pit lay quiet. For long seconds the brown surface of the mud pit was still. Bubbles rose and disappeared, a few ripples lapped the edge; beyond that, no faintest sign revealed that down there two bodies lay locked in conflict.

Then once again the mirror smoothness was shattered. Once more the mud was beaten to yellow, viscous foam, and now a head rose. Drew Thorne clambered out upon the bank, holding Sergei by the throat.

Mud-covered and dripping, almost unrecognizable, they seemed more beast than human; more like grotesque dwellers of some jungle swamp.

Just beyond the pool's edge Drew released his hold, and the Russian sank prostrate, coughing the muddy water from his lungs. There, scarcely breathing, he lay wiping his bloodshot eyes while furtively he looked at Drew and the jungle. For a moment longer he lay motionless and watchful, then, gathering his feet beneath him, scurried for the sheltering screen of palms.

Almost he reached it. Not quite. Halfway across the clearing Drew's two arms wrapped about him, bore him to the ground, knocking the breath from his body; then, holding him by the shirt, Drew dragged him back to the derrick floor.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

Up on the savanna the little camp had come to life. That runaway pounding of the drill stem was bringing men down from the shack; already the road was dotted with half-clothed forms headed for the well, and before Drew could reach the derrick one of them had closed the valve.

"Take that dynamite away!" Dropping the Russian in a heap before the gathering circle of men, Drew ordered tersely, "Tie him up."

With his shirt he started to wipe the mud from his face, then suddenly he stopped and smelled his hand. Could it be? Not daring to believe his senses, Thorpe raised both wet hands to his nostrils, then, seizing a flashlight, bent over the mud pit. The surface was flecked with a thousand glistening drops. He raised the beam of light to the pipe—muddy oil was gushing from the well.

Men were crowding about him, peering over his shoulder, and now, through the darkness a solitary voice cried, "Oil!"

For the space of a heartbeat none could speak. Then a wild cheer split the night—they had struck the missing sand! And with that cry all strength drained away from Drew. The earth was swirling beneath his feet, and blindly he leaned against the ladder; then, as quickly as it had come, that momentary weakness passed. Once more he raised his eyes—no doubt this time. It was oil.

Like a madman he raced up the path, and over the edge of the savanna to the shack where Spud was groping his way toward the gate. Wild with elation, Drew threw both arms about the man's shoulder.

"We struck it!" he shouted. "Oil, Spud—it's oil! Listen, Spud, can you hear? Listen!" Louder than before from down in the river bottom rose the deep chorus of men's voices, cheering, shouting, making the jungle night resonant with their rejoicing. Spud could not answer. Tears were streaming from his eyes.

But it was an ominous group that gathered about the shack when Drew told of Sergei's attack on Hank and the attempted dynamiting of the well. Nor was the temper of the men improved when two loaded revolvers were found beneath the Russian's bunk. Through it all Sergei crouched by the door of the shack, looking up at those threatening forms with thoroughly frightened eyes; but to every question Drew asked he only muttered, "I do not talk."

From out of the crowd a burly Kansan pushed his way, a length of heavy pipe in his hand. "I'll make the rotten skunk talk," he growled.

But Drew stepped between. "Lay off, Joe," he ordered.

"Because I said so. There's a better way."

Suddenly Joe dropped his weapon and, still muttering, moved back.

"I can tell you what happened," Drew turned again to the men. "Sergei's been in Franz Alter's pay from the start. He was put here to hold us up in every way he could. After thought he was playing safe when he gave Sergei orders not to let the well come in; and tonight, when traces of oil began to show in the mud stream, Sergei went for the dynamite. He might have wrecked our well without anyone's ever knowing we'd hit oil; and even if we had found it out, we'd never have been able to sink another well within the time limit. Either way Alter would have stopped us."

Drew recalled the solid sense of Standing close to Drew, Spud had made no comment; but now he said soberly, "And don't ever think Alter's done with you yet, Drew. You're in for a showdown fight from now on."

Every man in the crowd realized the truth of Spud's words, and Sergei's close-set eyes gleamed brighter.

All night they worked, "washing in the well," replacing the mud stream with pure water, screwing a choke on the outlet to cut down the flow, and by morning the well was running clean oil. In sheer happiness Drew watched it streaming, green-gold, iridescent in the sunlight. Wildcat 13 was a reality. They had brought it in—and they had been so close to failure. He was under no illusions about the struggle that might lie ahead; but, whatever happened, his faith in the Rio Bravo field had been justified.

FOOD STYLES IN WARTIME AVOID WASTE

Motto: Lick Your Plate,
Leave the Platter
Clean

Food fashions, like everything else, are changing. The food conservation program makes every citizen realize the importance of avoiding waste, whether in the form of cooked or raw food. Willful waste may not immediately make you feel bad, but every ounce of food that's wasted means that much less for our fighting men and allies whose needs for food are greater than ever before.

Patriotism and necessity are influencing our eating manners. Says Jessie Alice Cline, home economist, it's the style, and an important one too, to leave a clean plate. Servings should just fit the appetite, not too small because in these wartime days when lots of work must be done every person should be well fed and in sufficient amounts that he has a feeling of satisfaction after eating, and not too large, because no food should be left on the plate to be thrown away later.

It's the style to eat potato skins, too. Baked potatoes or potatoes cooked in their jackets have a lot of good minerals just beneath the skin, so when they're thrown away we're not getting the greatest nutritive value for our money. And this brings up the subject of eating the greens under salads. Valuable minerals and vitamins are stored there to be had for the eating.

The sugar supply should go farther now because it's considered good manners to stir tea and coffee vigorously after adding sugar, so we can get its full sweetening value. This will be even more important when ice tea days appear—if we have the feed tea.

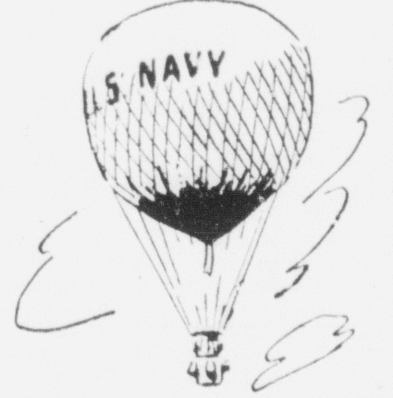

We used to eat bread and gravy when we ate alone, or put aside our "Sunday" manners, but now it's the style to eat gravy on hot biscuits, muffins and bread. Every homemaker is being asked to save all drippings and to serve them as gravy to extend the good meat flavor and add nutritive value to the meal.

Everyone likes to eat around the bone of a juicy broiled lamb chop or a piece of fried chicken, and now we're not only told that it's permissible from the standpoint of manners, but we're encouraged to follow the procedure because it's the trend in the style toward patriotic eating. Every particle of meat is precious these days.

These are just a few changes in our manners, but there will be more in the future as we awaken to the many ways of avoiding waste. And each will make its contribution towards building citizens with that "well-fed" look.

New All-Purpose Grind And New Brewing Methods Stretch Coffee Rations

Since coffee rationing, many shoppers have had difficulty finding decaffeinated coffee in the type of grind they have been accustomed to using. To solve this wartime problem, all brands of decaffeinated coffee from now on will be manufactured in a new all-purpose grind which is designed to fit the requirements of any coffee-making apparatus. The all-purpose grind takes less coffee than the regular grind. A rounded tablespoon of all-purpose grind for each standard measuring cup (eight ounces) of water are the proportions most people prefer.

Here are some other practical wartime tips on making the family supply of decaffeinated coffee stretch a little farther. If you use a vacuum type pot, keep the decaffeinated coffee in the upper compartment an extra three minutes—five or six minutes in all. If you use a percolator, perk the decaffeinated brew very slowly and gently for about 18 minutes.

Sweet Dreams Brew

Use a rounded tablespoon of all purpose grind decaffeinated coffee to every cup (½ pint) water. Make by boiled or percolated method. If percolated, "perk" 18 to 20 minutes, slowly and gently, or longer than ordinary coffee, to bring out its full, rich coffee flavor. When serving, pour milk and coffee together into cup in equal amounts. Fiping hot decaffeinated coffee is a good antidote for wartime nerves. Even a demi tasse will do wonders in helping everyone to relax. If you use a vacuum coffee pot, leave the coffee in the upper compartment for 5 or 6 minutes instead of the usual 3 or 4 to get the maximum strength.

GARDEN VEGETABLES MAKE EXCELLENT AND TASTY SUMMER SALAD

By Mrs. Katharine G. Moon
(Home Economics Representative)

Nothing tastes quite so cool, crisp, and refreshing on a warm summer day as a salad made from your own family garden. Most gardens offer lettuce, endive, and other greens, radishes, onions, carrots, cucumbers, tomatoes, beets, peas, and snap beans.

A salad of mixed raw vegetables provides plenty of vitamins and minerals for good health. Gather the vegetables either early in the morning or late in the day when they are cool and crisp. Wash the vegetables thoroughly and put in refrigerator or other cool place.

When ready to make the mixed vegetable salad, use one or more greens, breaking or cutting them into pieces, add chopped onion, shredded carrots and sliced radishes. Tomatoes may be used in season. Add a tart French dressing just before serving, mix lightly, and serve in a salad bowl.

Be clever and make up your own combination of vegetables for this type of salad. Vary the dressing by adding herbs or other seasonings so that the salad always has a newness and is attractive and appetizing.

Cooked vegetables may be used for a mixed salad, or combined with raw vegetables, or added to fish or meat salads. Mayonnaise dressing may be used if desired with fish or meat.

Some garden greens are tasty when served as a wilted salad. Wash and crisp the greens, break or cut into pieces. Cut several slices of bacon into small pieces and fry until crisp, remove from pan. To fat in pan add vinegar, salt and sugar to taste, and a little chopped onion. Heat thoroughly, and stir into greens. Leave

CLEAN PLATE CLUB

ST. LOUIS.—(INS)—The families of many employees of the Curtiss-Wright Corp. are really all-out for victory. To conserve food supplies, the plant recently announced formation of a Clean Plate Club for youngsters of employees. There are no dues to pay, no box tops to save, no coupons to clip. The youngster fills out his application, and pledges himself to clean his plate at every meal—and he's in.

AKRON, O.—(INS)—Postwar golf balls may have centers of liquid cane sugar inside a core of rubber. Dr. Richard A. Crawford, a research scientist at the B. F. The new center will be permanently liquid even at low temperatures, the inventor declared.

Russia, India, China To Get More Planes

North African success raised the island's seige.

Before that victory, Transport Command took more than 4,000 passengers and nearly a million pounds of essential supplies to the George Cross Island. Total of trips during this vital work added to 1,100,000 miles.

The trans-Atlantic supply and ferry route has been called "Main Street" by Sir Frederick Bowhill. That was over a year ago, and it can be stated Main Street today is handling a far greater traffic than ever before.

Service Commands here in Britain, as well as Africa and Asia, are regularly expanding their facilities to handle the increasing number of planes shuttling to the war fronts. Major General Miller, C-in-C 8th Air Force Service Command, stated the other day in London:

"We are ready to receive the great new flow of aircraft from the United States to the European Theater of Operations. We are ready to do our share in stepping up the bombing of Germany, and we have the equipment, manpower and facilities to do it."

Many combat Fortresses and Liberators destined for daylight precision attacks on Germany from British bases, are flown over by their own crews "all set to go into action." But many reinforcements, airmen, both British Empire and American, are ferried here by Air Transport Command, which thus helps to ensure that bomber crew losses do not diminish in strength in subsequent attacks.

Air Transport Command pilots maintain a strong flow of Liberators, Catalinas, Fortresses and other airplanes for the RAF's Coastal Command, which plays so vital a role in the Battle of the Atlantic. Although infrequently publicized, their share of the Air and June victories over the U-boat fleets was a considerable one.

Losses of aircraft during the ferrying stages across to Britain, and thence to the more active battlefronts, have been kept to a small fraction of the whole. Compared to hundreds of planes arriving safely at their operational destination, only two or three have been lost.

The pilots are among the best trained, most experienced in the world and a complex meteorology organization backs them up with accurate weather forecasts.

Here in Britain a fairly large number of women, today totalling several hundred, work with the Air Transport Auxiliary in flying capacities. Their job is to ferry planes from factories to aerodromes. That, too, can be a dangerous job since the planes are unarmed, must fly very low, and have on many occasions tangled with patrolling enemy fighters.

It is not a very dramatic job, that of ferrying planes across the Atlantic for as long as 18 unchanging hours at a stretch. It is not very exciting, really, to be shot at over Britain when you are ferrying a training plane from factory to aerodrome.

Bu thousands of men and women, civilians and military personnel alike, have volunteered for this job. It is they who are ensuring Sir Frederick's "Main Street" is extended to Berlin and the Ruhr in the form of shattering day and night bombing attacks to pulverize enemy war industry.

British 8th Army Captures Catania

It appears the Germans decided to pull out of Catania when troops of the American Seventh Army looped around Mt. Etna threatened to cut them off from the north. They had to escape a trap developing and rely on their ability to reach fortifications at Messina for a do-or-die battle.

The race for Messina now is liable to develop into a heavy rear-guard action as the Germans seek to delay the Allied troops, driving to isolate the island from the mainland.

The battle for Catania began immediately after British troops crossed the Dittina River to the south, cleared a path through the Nazi mine-fields and swept into the outskirts.

Meanwhile, Allied land, air and naval forces pulled the noose tighter all around the Messina bridgehead, inflicting creeping paralysis upon the German defensive system by cutting the main communication arteries.

American naval units off Cape Orland maintained ceaseless bombardment of enemy positions, rendering the only coastal road and railway line useless to traffic, while British warships reduced the Taormina road and rail arteries on the east coast to twisted, shell-pitted wreckage, thus hamstringing enemy communications on both sides of the island.

British naval aircraft attacked a Nazi E-boat pack off Capri and sank three and seriously damaged another. The aerial action over the English Channel was preceded by an attack late yesterday by American bombers on Nazi-operated shipyards at Le Trait, France, and

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Road Builders

That there is no easy road to Berlin or to Tokyo, all of us must realize and to aid in the long push our strategists are shipping hundreds and hundreds of road building units to help build the big road to Democracy.

Your part is to assist in this endeavor by steady and increasing purchase of War Bonds.

American road building machinery is the greatest in the world and was largely responsible for the record building of the Alcan highway to Alaska. "Figure It Out Yourself."

Kitty Carlisle To Star In "Tonight or Never"

Kitty Carlisle, of musical comedy and screen fame, and Wilbur Evans, Philadelphia, who have become well known in concert, radio and musical comedy, will be co-starred in "Tonight or Never," at the Bucks County Playhouse in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, the week starting Monday, August 9th.

"Tonight or Never" is a gay, slightly audacious and delicately charming concoction written by Lili Hatvany, and adapted by Fredric and Fanny Hatton. A prima donna unable to reach the great heights her voice promised, because, as her faithful teacher informs her, she lacks warmth and emotional glow. She had never really and fully lived. A mysterious young man enters her life, although he is reported to be a gigolo. She finds him strangely attractive. He stirs within her the qualities necessary to a great artist and she scores a notable triumph in "La Tosca." An original twist in the proceedings is provided at the very conclusion. The comedy offers opportunity for songs by Miss Carlisle and Mr. Evans.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

WITH increasing numbers of fricassee chickens arriving in market and prospects for a better supply of beef next week, problems of the Sunday dinner's main dish should be considerably lightened.

There are plenty of fresh pork chops and butts available this week, with some loins, according to the A & P Food Service for Homemakers. The supply of lamb is about the same as last week.

Melons and berries continue in the higher price brackets and while the supply of peaches is increasing, prices are by no means low. The majority of the vegetables are from nearby markets with beans, cabbage and green among the best buys.

The following menus are planned to help you with Sunday dinner:

No. 1
Meat Loaf
Scalloped Noodles
Stuffed Yellow Squash
Wilted Lettuce Salad
Cracked Wheat Bread
Iced Apple Juice
Cookies

No. 2
Broiled Liver with Tomato Sauce

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor
Bristol Presbyterian Church

O God, our Father, we thank Thee for the privilege of fellowship with Thee. We praise thy Name that thou hast given unto us the channel of prayer by which we can speak to thee, and hear thy voice. Deliver us from stereotyped prayer, from habitual prayer lost in formalism. Enable us to make each observance of prayer a new adventure in fellowship, and may we not conclude our prayer until we have a fuller revelation of thy nearness and thy power than had previously been ours. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

RAILROAD MILEPOST

PHILADELPHIA—(INS) — The fiftieth anniversary of the installation of the first electrically operated semaphore signal in the world, an invention that revolutionized railroading, has just been celebrated. The pioneer equipment, first used on the Jersey Central line of the Reading Company just outside Philadelphia, N. J., was the invention of J. W. Lattin, 89, now living in retirement at Bethlehem, Pa.

GIVES ALL TO UNCLE SAM

PHILADELPHIA—(INS) — Topping all the records of numerous Americans who convert their entire salaries into war bonds is a Quaker City shipyard worker. Agostino Luciano invests all his wages as a gasket maker at Cramp's Shipyard and about $10 in addition, for an average of three bonds every week since last Armistice Day. The tasty spaghetti and other dishes that Luciano concocts at his restaurant make it possible for him to buy the bonds, which in his own mind he has dedicated to building up a three ocean navy.

ON THE SCREENS

RITZ THEATRE
With none of the chief players beyond that glorious, giddy age of carefree youth, "Youth On Parade," Abel.

"Angels Over Broadway" hailed as one of the most tenderly human romances of the year, opens today at the Bristol Theatre. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. is starred; featured members of the cast include Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell and John Qualen.

Hit No. 2 on the same program is the thrilling jungle story "Beyond the Blue Horizon" starring Dorothy Lamour, Jack Haley and Walter Abel.

PRISON OFFICERS OF TRENTON TO PLAY FLEETWINGS NINE

Re-Match Game To Take Place Tonight on High School Field

EXPECT FAST CONTEST

Both Teams Are Out To Win Tonight's Diamond Battle

The Fleetwings Arrows baseball team will engage in the third re-match of the season when they once again play the Trenton State Prison Officers ball team this evening at Bristol High School field.

The Arrows, once again tripping merrily along the victory path, have twice lost to the hot-shot State Prison ball team. But this time they've sharpened their bats to a fine edge and are confident of cutting the opposition down. The turn-key men, however, are bitterly unaware of the impending storm awaiting them and fully expect another easy victory. It should be fun to see their Great Expectations toppled beginning 8:30 p. m. Thursday evening.

DIAMOND TEAM MAY DEADLOCK FOR LEAD

The Diamond team will have an opportunity of moving into a deadlock for first place in the Bristol Suburban League this evening when it meets the Hunter nine on the Maple Beach field. Game will begin at 6:30 o'clock.

Diamond is one-half game behind the league-leading, Volta-Texas nine, having won four and lost two while the gamblers have won five games and lost two. Rohm and Haas, in third place, has four victories and two defeats, while Hunter's has dropped seven straight games.

It is most likely that Dick Hirst will pitch for Diamond with Joe Sagolla tossing them in for the Hunter boys.

MARTIN THE COACH DOWNS MARTIN, BOXER

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 5 (INS)—Although one of his former international boxing pupils, Bob Montgomery, recognized New York lightweight champion, won't give him a chance at the title, George Martin, Boston boxer, still is not a disillusioned fighter.

George takes time out in training bouts with younger boxers to teach the youngsters pointers on the game.

"There's no reason why an experienced boxer should simply go out and beat the brains out of some poor kid who's doing something wrong that's easily correctable," George says. "I get a kick out of watching boys improve."

Martin's ten years in the ring have taught him practically all of the boxing answers. "Anything I had to learn, I learned," he smiles grimly.

"I have always been willing to give out to the kids. Always will. 'Sometimes I've maybe taught them too much. A few years ago when I was boxing around New York I trained with a kid named Ben Kaplan."

"He was a good biter, but at last left himself wide open. I taught him a good defense and what happened?"

"I got matched up with him, and the guy was the light."

George says "Montgomery was a former student of mine. Maybe that's why he won't fight me now."

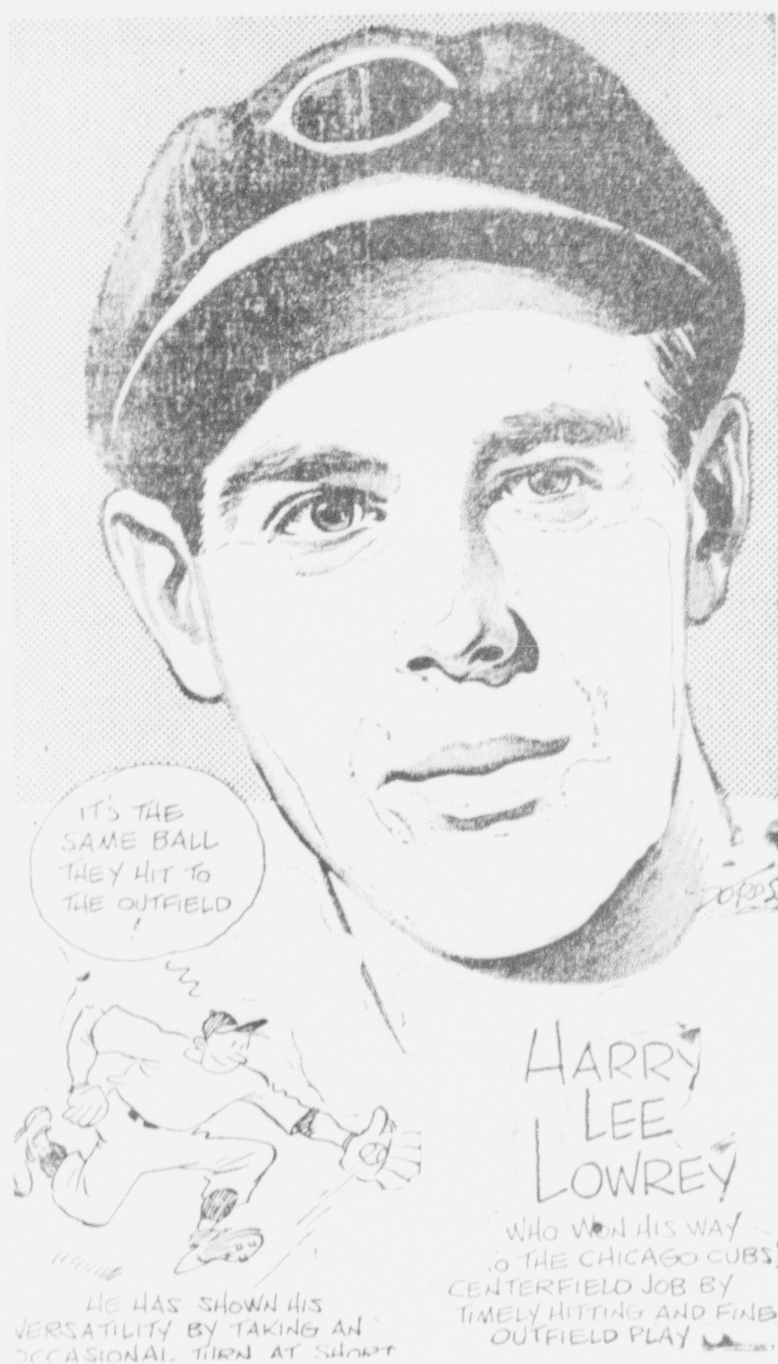

"One of those days," prophesies George, "I'm going to get into the same ring with Sugar Ray Robinson. They call the guy the uncrowned welterweight champion of the world. I think I can beat him."

"Meanwhile, there's no harm in fooling around with and teaching the kids a trick or two. Maybe some of them are future champions, too."

der to prevent passersby from falling into it.

Stout has appeared before Council during this period as regularly as the heavy rains, but this is the first time he has sent his attorney.

This property is now so damaged that it probably could not be sold for more than $500.

Council told Mr. Achey that since the damage was on private property they had no authority to spend public money on it.

The repairing of underground flood damages caused by the heavy rains this Summer was the principal matter under consideration by Sellersville Borough Council.

Street Superintendent Philip Coll, said his recent investigations indicated that the storm sewers on Main street had been greatly worn away by the action of rocks and silt washed through the sewers by flood waters. This was especially true near the Lehigh Valley Transit Company station where electrolysis has also affected the water and sewer pipes near the station. Some of the metal pipes were so badly eaten by the electrical reaction from the trolley lines that they must be replaced.

Sewer pipes from private residences running into the regular sewer system were cut off by rolling stones passing through the storm sewer. As a result the sewerage from those homes has been emptying into the Branch Creek which receives the surface water from the storm sewer.

A large amount of concrete also has been torn away under Main street damaging it so badly that several Councilmen pointed out the danger of a cave-in, especially where the heavy trucks pass. Mr. Coll was ordered to have the street repaired at that point.

The office personnel of the Valcanized Rubber Company, Morrisville, recently entertained at a party in honor of Miss Mary A. French, of 526 Gladstone avenue, Morrisville, who left Thursday for active duty with the WAVES.

The following attended the affair, which was held at the home of Miss Betty Keys, of 291 West Franklin street: Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Rodland and Evelyn; Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Jannet; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Konover; Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Dalrymple; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burgess; Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis; Mr. and Mrs. John Busche; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Troia; Mrs. Robert Dolinski; Mrs. Gertrude Noonan; Mrs. Carlson; Mrs. Edna Schmidt; Mr. and Mrs. William Hindick; and Mrs. Colleen Moran.
